The History

The Shelby Mustangs started out as orphan projects tucked away in whatever space was left at Shelby American's facility to use. Carroll Shelby said the Mustang prior to 65 was a "secretary's car," although they were trying to market it toward the younger crowd. It needed a makeover, and they had the man to do it. Shelby's friend and supporter, Lee Iacocca, urged the program on. Built for the street as well as the racing circuit, it was to become a street hot-rod that was uniquely successful on the road courses and drag strips where it won championships in 1965 - 1967. Despite Shelby's hesitation at first to get involved with the project, he and his company would go on to exceed all expectations in giving Ford's Mustang a legendary performance image that is arguably the most sought after muscle car worldwide.

2012 GT500 SUPER SNAKE:

The original Shelby Mustangs were so successful due to the performance and passion that Carroll Shelby brought to the table in the 1960s. Today, Shelby still brings that performance, passion and pursuit of excellence that the name is so renowned for. Today's modern Shelby Mustangs are packed with more venom than ever before, and with today's advances in technology they have surpassed the originals. The Super Snake boasts up to 800HP and has the power to run the times on the drag strip to merit the name Shelby.
